		Archiving Research in Criminal Justice & Health (ARCH) Network Presenters Carmen Gutierrez, Erin DeMartino, Farah Kaiksow, Rodlescia Sneed, & Louisa Holaday	Addressing barriers to HIV care & prevention services following release from incarceration for people with & at risk for HIV Amour Castillo, Jordy Rojas Antigua, Dawun Smith, Fatoumata Kaba-Diakite, Vivien Ko Sweet, Lauren Mulcahy, Micaela Linder, Lindsey Riback, Jonathan Ross, Aaron D. Fox, & Matthew J. Akiyama
		Despite decades of unprecedented growth in incarceration & the rapidly aging prison population, research & researchers focused on aging within the criminal legal system remain limited. Early-career scholars interested in aging, health, & incarceration often lack mentorship, community, collaboration, & funding, & many are the sole investigators in this area at their institutions. Established in 2019, the NIA-funded ARCH Network connects a multidisciplinary, international group of researchers & community leaders committed to understanding the life course experiences of justice-involved older adults & translating findings into policy & practice. Over the past five years, ARCH has supported early-career scholars through mentorship, collaboration, & assistance in developing funded research programs. In this panel, five emerging scholars will present lightning talks on their current work & discuss how ARCH has shaped their collaborations, methodologies, & successful career development award applications.	Feasibility & acceptability of a peer-led status-neutral, post-incarceration HIV intervention: preliminary findings from the DESTnation pilot study Lindsey Riback, Jordy Rojas Antigua, Fatoumata Kaba-Diakite, Dawun Smith, Amour Castillo, Micaela Linder, Jonathan Ross, Aaron D.
